TERRITORIAL NOTES.

Clifton Clarion: People in Arizona and New Mexico who have had their property destroyed by the Indians should get their claims in proper shape and file them in the Interior Department.

Kingman Tribune: There was shipped from this point to eastern smelters during the past month 217 tons of ore. This is a decided improvement over former months, as the shipments for July and August had fallen off to almost nothing.

Tucson Times: The first shipment of twelve bars of bullion from the bonanza mines at Quijotas was turned over to Wells, Fargo & Co.'s agent, R. H. Smith, at five o'clock, in the afternoon of the 1st inst. The average weight of the bars is one hundred pounds, and there is more to follow.

Prescott Journal: Some time since three horses were stolen at or near Phoenix, the thieves in possession of them heading for this county. Sheriff Mulvenon was notified by the Maricopa county officials and requested to be on the lookout for them. He struck their trail and followed them to near Kingman, arresting the thieves and recovering the stolen horses. He presented a bill to the Maricopa county authorities, but the Board of Supervisors there refused to allow it, refusing to pay even for the board of the prisoners while in jail here, awaiting the arrival of the Maricopa officials.

Prescott Courier: It is rumored that Indians who recently returned from Mexico, killed a man on Blue River, which is about 280 miles east of Prescott. At least this is what a dispatch from Col. Mark Eagan, to Gov. Tritle states. Acting upon this information, the Governor, with his adjutant, go to Albuquerque to consult with Gov. Ross. Gen. Crook tells people of southwestern New Mexico and eastern Arizona to be on the look out. Gov. Tritle finds that he has no funds to defray expenses of the militia, but some companies will be placed in the field anyway. While reiterating the advice of General Crook, for people to look out, the Courier is rather pleased to be told that the Indians have come back from Mexico, for, if such be the case, Crook will very soon reconstruct the sons of guns. If there are other Indians who want to break out, let them do so now, so that our people can make a business of fighting and killing the red scoundrels.

Clifton Clarion: Tom Welch, who was severely wounded by the Indians, when they left the reservation in May, and narrowly escaped with his life, arrived in Clifton Friday from his ranch on the Blue, and reported that W. R. Raspberry, a miner and ranchman who lived about 65 miles northwest of Clifton, had been killed by Indians on the 19th. Frank Manning, who lives about one mile above Raspberry's ranch, took breakfast with him the morning he was shot, and reports that after breakfast Raspberry left the house with a rope to catch his horse. In a short time one shot was heard, and looking around he (Manning) discovered five or six bucks and two squaws. He fled to the house for protection, and was fired on but not injured. The Indians left going east. Raspberry was shot in the mouth and death was instantaneous. Manning immediately went to the ranch of Tom Welch, and securing the assistance of the latter, returned and buried the body near where it fell, when both came into Clifton with the sad intelligence. Before coming to Arizona, where he has resided for several years, Mr. Raspberry was a resident of San Bernardino county, California, and it was there that the writer knew him well.

LIVE STOCK NEWS.

Items of Interest to Stockmen, Gathered from Reliable Sources.

Dodge City (Kan.) Journal: W. P. Herring, of the Dominion Cattle company, has been down in Butler county, buying corn to feed two thousand steers this winter.

Exchange: The produce of one cow with heifer calf at her side will amount to 126 head in eleven years, allowing every fourth year to be a non-producing one for each female.

Exchange: The shipment of frozen meat from Australia is a success only as to mutton. The difficulty is to get the meat frozen clear down to the bone, which is particularly hard to accomplish with beef.

Globe Stock Journal: The run of cattle from the north is not near so large at this season of the year as it was at this time last season. Two good reasons may be attributed; the decline in the market, and the diminished number of beef steers in that section.

Fort Worth (Tex.) Journal: Mr. J. N. Porter, of Whitney, Texas, called in to see the Journal Thursday. Mr. Porter is ranching near Dragoon's Summit, Arizona, and intends shipping about 600 more cattle from Whitney to his ranch in a short time. He reports the grass as being in fine condition in his region.

Colorado Live Stock Record: We are convinced, after talking with men from all parts of the grain and hay growing country, that Colorado farmers will feed a half more steers for the shambles this winter than they did last. We have a dozen inquiries a day for feeders. Men are not quite ready to buy, but they wish to know where when they are ready.

Dodge City (Kan.) Cowboy: A gentleman in Arizona wanted to put a lot of cow ponies from that Territory on the Dodge City market, but he was advised not to bring them here. There is no demand here now for cow ponies. Good cow ponies, broke, which brought $60 two years ago, have been selling for $30, and southern Texas breeding ponies have been sold as low as $12. Only a few tailings are now left in this market. About 6,000 head have been sold here this year.

Las Cruces (N. M.) Republican: A few weeks ago the history of a gang of horse thieves, whose headquarters were in a small settlement near Fort Selden, was given in the Republican. Monday the authorities were so fortunate as to capture the ring-leader of the gang, Francisco Barela, having proof conclusive of the workings of the thieves in his possession; among other things, Barela had a common blank book, in which he wrote bills of sale for the stolen stock, and whenever one was required he tore out a leaf. He was committed to jail in default of bail.

New Mexico Stock Grower: The "bad man" cowboy racket is played out. What is a cowboy that he should be allowed to make a public nuisance of himself? A cowboy is a herder of cows, and as such he is employed, and not for the purpose of making a bravo or assassin of himself. Cattlemen are getting very tired of the few of these fellows who still infest the country and give the business and the honest cowboys a hard name. It is about time that a few of these hard characters were discharged and not re-employed in the country. The more northern counties of Colfax and Mora, have a splendid outfit of men. Not a six-shooter or a quarrelsome fellow in the lot. It is a duty which stockmen owe themselves to do away with this six-shooter business and have it stop right here.

The boundary between Massachusetts and New Hampshire has been in dispute 100 years. No strictly legal line exists. In 1741 the king of England directed representatives of both provinces to jointly make a map in accord with some general directions, but Massachusetts did not obey, and New Hampshire did the work alone. A strip of the Merrimac Valley is the doubtful ground.

The Grangers of Kansas at one of their agricultural expositions erected a unique monument to the memory of Gen. Grant. It consists of an obelisk of corn, rising to a height of forty-seven feet. The pedestal, seven feet high, is covered with cornstalks, arranged in an artistic fashion, and having on each of its sides a picture of Grant set in wreaths of popcorn with red pepper intertwined. The shaft is composed of ears of yellow corn, and on its four faces worked in red ears, are the inscriptions: "Peace," "Plenty," "Union" and "Liberty." On each corner of the pedestal is a mammoth pumpkin, while giant cornstalks, stacked like arms, stand around the monument.
